Threat Assessment: A Community Based Approach

Sandra Smith, Dean of Students

Eric Plummer, Chief of Police

Southern Arkansas University

Since the tragedy at Virginia Tech, threat assessment has been at the forefront of community safety. The main question asked is “How can we implement a threat assessment team and gain community assistance in identifying potential threats to make our community safe?” We will look at introducing the law enforcement model of “Policing Through Practical Partnership” programs into the community along with establishing a model threat assessment program that uses constant case tracking and management techniques to ensure that potential threats do not slip through the cracks and become our next tragedy.
